2. History

|-----------|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Sep. 2014 | - Adopted by the Ministry of Education, Culture, Sports, Science and Technology, for the FY2014 "Support Program for Creating Top Global Universities" |
| Apr. 2008 | - Establishment of the "Undergraduate Department of Computer Science and Engineering," and start of the new curriculum - Establishment of the "Graduate Department of Computer and Information Systems" and the "Graduate Department of Information Technology and Project Management." |
| Apr. 2006 | - Establishment of "the Public University Corporation, the University of Aizu" - Transfer of the founding authority of the University of Aizu to the "Public University Corporation, the University of Aizu" from the "Fukushima Prefectural Government" |
| Apr. 1999 | - Establishment of the Graduate School "Doctoral Program" |
| Apr. 1997 | - Establishment of the Graduate School "Master's Program" |
| Apr. 1993 | - Opening of the University of Aizu |
| Dec. 1992 | - Approval of the establishment of the University of Aizu by the Ministry of Education |

The people of Aizu have been diligent about childhood education since the Nisshinkan clan school was established in the Edo Era during the rule of the Aizu Clan. The area, however, had only one institution of higher education – Fukushima Prefectural Aizu Junior College – which was opened in 1951. People of Aizu continued their campaigns to invite a four-year university to the region since the middle of 1960s.

Given the importance of nurturing leaders who can contribute to advancement of information science from an outward-looking standpoint in the midst of globalization and informatization, Fukushima Prefecture decided to establish, in the education-focused area of Aizu, a four-year university which solely pursues computer science and engineering education and research.

In 1993, the University of Aizu opened, as the first university in Japan solely dedicated to computer science and engineering.

3. Curriculum Policy of the Graduate School of Computer Science and Engineering

The curriculum of the Graduate School has five course groups which consist of regular courses, thesis research courses, seminars, conversion courses, and teaching profession and related courses. The curriculum is designed for students to acquire specialized knowledge and skills in computer science and engineering from fundamentals to applications, to solve practical problems related to ICT industry, and to do research on structure and function of “information”.

The regular courses and research related courses in multiple fields of study will enable students to acquire specialized knowledge and skills in computer science and engineering from fundamentals to applications. The regular courses consist of core courses and advanced courses, and students can acquire well-balanced knowledge by taking a certain number of core courses.

Seminars include courses for English presentation and Project-Based Learning (PBL), etc. Students can acquire more advanced knowledge, creativity and ability to discover and solve problems through proactive and self-directed learning. The seminars help students to become leading computer scientists and engineers with strong professional English skills.

In addition, conversion courses for students whose major in undergraduate education was not computer science and engineering, and courses to obtain the specialized certificate for teaching math and information are provided.

1.2.2 Seminar Courses

The Graduate School requires students to acquire higher knowledge and to foster their creativity and ability to identify and solve problems through positive and self-directed learning. Toward this end, the School offers seminars for students to supplement their own voluntary studies through exposure to diverse points of view, and at the same time to study with a wider perspective, not limited solely to their field of study.

<Graduate Department of Computer and Information Systems>

Students are required to earn a total of 4 credits among Research Seminars I and II (2 courses, 4 credits). II-iv Early Detection of and Provision of Care for Students Experiencing Severe Difficulty with Academic Performance, Etc., and “Recommendation to Withdraw from the University”

The scheme, “Detection and Care for Students Experiencing Severe Difficulty with Poor Academic Performance, etc. at an Early Juncture” was put into practice to support students’ learning and campus life, from November 2002.

The university might give a recommendation for withdrawal from the university to students who have earned the extremely small number of credits after the admission, regarding them as those having no chance to complete the program, based on Article 38 of the Ruling on the University of Aizu Graduate School. Even though students failed to regain motivation to study and followed the recommendation to withdraw from the university, if they once again regain motivation to study at UoA Graduate School, they are given a chance for readmission through individual interviews and submission of essays, etc., if they are eager to resume their studies within three years from the date of their withdrawal.

(1) Detection and Care for Students Experiencing Severe Difficulty with Poor Academic Performance, etc. at an Early Juncture

A. Through early detection of and provision of care for students who are experiencing severe difficulty and poor academic achievements for some reasons including uneasiness about their studies and life, the University will make efforts to help students maintain or regain their motivation to continue their studies and student life.

B. Students who need consultations (definition of “Students Experiencing Severe Difficulty with Poor Academic Performance”)

(2) Recommendation to Withdrawal from the University

The university might give a recommendation for withdrawal from the university to students who have earned the extremely small number of credits after admission and/or who have not exhibited a willingness to study despite advice given on their studies, student life and/or future paths. This recommendation is given based on Article 38 of the Ruling on the University of Aizu Graduate School to students who are regarded as those having no chance to complete the relevant graduate program in order to encourage them to change course.

However, this is a mere recommendation and such students are never forced to withdraw from the university. Students make decisions on their own as to whether to leave the university to start down a new path.

Even though students failed to regain motivation to study and followed the recommendation to withdraw from the university, if they once again regain motivation to study at UoA Graduate School, they might be given a chance for readmission through individual interviews and submission of essays, etc., if they are eager to resume their studies within three years from the date of their withdrawal.

III -ii Information Processing Environments

1. Use of the Information Processing Environments

The information processing environments of the University of Aizu aim to realize advanced education and research of computer science.

These information processing environments are called as “AINS (The University of Aizu Information Network System.)” which is managed by the Information Processing Center (IPC) of the Information Systems and Technology Center (ISTC). AINS are architected to maintain entire coherence of hundreds (for Solaris11, 300, for macOS, 200) of FLOSS, or Free/Libre and Open Source Software.

Together with the University Library, the IPC belongs to the ISTC. and is responsible for the management and administration of AINS.

There are rules and manners that AINS users must strictly follow to enjoy the benefits of our information processing environments.

AINS is equipped with campus-wide Wireless LAN connectivity. It uses a system called EAP-TLS and EAP-PEAP, EAP-TTLS which combines safety and usability.

AINS provides students with a place to engage in the learning and research that is needed to become professionals. Students are strongly encouraged to make full use of all university facilities actively in order to become computer professionals in the future.

For maintenance of AINS at on-campus organizations/centers, undergraduates and graduate school students are hired as Computer Systems management Assistant. Duties include assisting with the management and maintenance of hardware, software, etc. Honorarium is paid to those employed as Computer Systems Management Assistants.

For more details of AINS, please read the “University Regulation on the Use of the Information Systems and Technology Center (Information Processing Center)” and “Instructions for Using AINS”. (Online versions are available at <https://web-int.u-aizu.ac.jp/labs/istc/ipc>.)

2. System Support Base (SSB)

For any technical issues regarding AINS, or questions about the information processing environment, email the SSB at std-help@u-aizu.ac.jp.

For any issues which cannot be solved by email or require ID confirmation, please visit the SSB.

Further, when your AINS account is locked due to violation of AINS rules, come to SSB with your student ID card for unlocking your account. Please note that contact by phone call or email will NOT be accepted for unlocking network accounts.

<SSB>

- Location: Room 207-E, 2F, the Research Quadrangles
- Ext.: 3375

- E-mail: std-help@u-aizu.ac.jp
- Open from 9:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. on weekdays

3. Features of AINS

The following three features are provided by the University of Aizu computer system:

- (1) Making use of the AINS's open architecture, the specifications for which are publicly available, you can gain application ability in various fields. This open architecture also enables users to get to vast software and hardware resources. Students are allowed to use computers in Computer Exercise Rooms whenever they want if they are not currently being used for classes. At any computer in those rooms, you can access your files and directories (folders) in the same manner.
- (2) A UNIX-based computer environment, selected for its easy-to-comprehend system operation, is available for use. Further, various Free/Libre and Open Source Software (FLOSS) programs designed to comply with UoA's computer environments are available. The UNIX-based OS mainly used here are Oracle's Solaris, Apple's macOS and REDHAT's RedHatEnterpriseLinux.
- (3) The AINS's open and flat network environment enables users to gain access to computer resources connected to AINS at any location transparently. Further, our on-campus wireless LAN enables you to connect a laptop, smartphone or tablet to AINS.

4. Computer Systems for Education

Computers installed in computer exercise rooms, etc. are available for 24 hours for lectures and exercises, students' reports and assignments as well as self-learning. In principle, students are given free access to these computers whenever relevant rooms are not in use for classes.

- (1) Computer Exercise Rooms (1 and 2)
Each room is equipped with 46 Solaris desktop PCs and 2 network printers.
- (2) Computer Exercise Rooms (3 and 4)
Each room is equipped with 52 Solaris desktop PCs and 2 network printers.
- (3) Computer Exercise Rooms (5 and 6)
Each room is equipped with 50 macOS desktops and 2 network printers.
- (4) Hardware Workshops (1 and 2)
Each room is equipped with 49 Windows desktop PCs and 2 network printers.
- (5) Hardware Workshops (3 and 4)
Each room is equipped with 25 Windows desktop PCs and one network printer.
- (6) Center for Language Research (CLR) Instructional Lab (iLab) (1 and 2) and Computer-Assisted Language Learning (CALL) (1 and 2)
These rooms are used for lectures and exercises of computer technical courses and language courses as well as for research. Each iLab is equipped with 49 macOS desktops and 2 network printers, and each CALL is equipped with 34 macOS desktops and one network printer.
Mainly classes using language learning software and audio-visual aids are given in these rooms.
- (7) Network and Remote Lecture Room B
Each room is equipped with 20 Windows desktop PCs and 1 network printers.
- (8) Common System Platform
Subsystems such as mail servers and file servers for management of e-mails and users' files are included in this platform. You seldom have an opportunity to see this platform, but it is an important system for your ordinary use of systems and for understanding computers and networks.

5. User Instructions

- (1) Upper limit of disk space
The upper limit of disk space is as follows.
 - a. Undergraduate students: 6.0 GB/student
 - b. Master's students: 6.0 GB/student
 - c. Doctoral students: 6.0 GB/studentStudents are required to observe these upper limits. If overuse has been identified, a warning e-mail message will be sent. When overuse occurs, there will be problems like impossibility to write further, file damages and inability to receive new arrival e-mails. On receiving a warning e-mail, you must immediately reduce the used amount.

(2) Frequent password change

Changing the user password on a periodic basis enhances the network security. If a user failed to change his/her password within 90 days after the latest change, he or she will be subject to the following action.

1. The ISTC will send him/her an e-mail message of password change.
2. If the user's password is not changed after a certain period of time following this message, his/her account will be locked.
